

Subj: Re: Stock Alarms
Date: 4:52:34 PM Eastern Daylight Time
From: MarkDeNyse
To: Ira Biz, ChukMcMath, CPerkins4, ScottQuill
CC: DonnerMrk
Sent on: AOL for Macintosh(0c11) sub 54

In a message dated 4:36:01 PM, Ira Biz writes:

>It's nit-picky, but having the "by:" label hide seems non-standrad to me.
>Why not append "by" to the menu items which are for relative values, and >then not have any label there?

I was trying to make it "flow" to the edit field, but what you suggest probably works better.

>If we start supporting foreign exchanges and the symbols from the various >exchanges use their native currency, then I think having "dollars" in the >popup will confuse the situation. If/when that happens, maybe we will want >it to say "Units" only.

Right, I think dropping "Dollars" completely and using something vague like "Units" (or nothing at all) avoids the labeling problem. Whatever number the user enters is by default "localized" to whatever currency that stock is represented in.